- ▶ We are delighted to host Councillor Graham Campbell in the QEUH Teaching and Learning Centre on Friday 27th Oct from 4pm till 6pm
- ▶ Graham Campbell is a veteran political campaigner and community activist who was elected as Glasgow's first African Caribbean Councillor in May 2017. He was instrumental in Glasgow City Council holding its first-ever official Black History Month event hosted by the Lord Provost in October 2017. He has a strong interest in supporting care-experienced young people, trade union rights, community empowerment, protecting cultural heritage and communities
- ▶ He says that the teachers were anti-racist and liberal-minded and knew how to challenge racism, which no doubt would have created an environment of openness and inclusion.

“I hung on to the idea that I have a right to express myself culturally. I’ve a right to be who I am, and I have a right to not take nonsense when it’s unfair and unjust.

What I think we are witnessing is the arrival (at last) of a Black African Scottish and BAME political sensibility. It is a Blackness emotionally attached to the fate of our sisters and brothers in the African American community and desperate to do something right here in Scotland. ”
